« Message from the Department »

In Japan's specialty-driven medical system, a large hospital with a strong General Internal Medicine (GIM) department is unique. The Division of GIM at St. Luke's International Hospital serves primarily as an outpatient division involved in primary care triage for unassigned patients, diagnosis of multisystem disease, and facilitating coordination for specialty care when appropriate. The Division of GIM also cares for a limited number of inpatients, with a focus on geriatric populations. The Division of GIM is actively involved in the training of visiting students, as well as junior and senior residents at the hospital.
